

Home > Culture and inclusion > Workplace Culture > Guidance: Consultation with Aboriginal people on desire for a treaty

Guidance: Consultation with Aboriginal people on desire for a treaty

The NSW Government has committed to a 12-month consultation process with Aboriginal people and communities across the state on whether a treaty or other formal agreement in NSW is desired and, if so, what it might look like.

This guidance highlights the importance of respectful behaviours and cultural safety, and provides support contacts for Aboriginal government sector employees. It also assists all employees in navigating their obligations to comply with the Ethical Framework for the government sector.

Learn more about the Treaty Consultation process.

Guidance: Consultation with Aboriginal people on desire for a treaty

Guidance for NSW government employees in relation to consultation with Aboriginal people on desire for a treaty.

Download a copy of the guidance →